INTRODUCTION

This section summarizes current understanding of the problem being investigated. It should state the objectives of the study and provide an adequate overview (background) and significance, discussing the relevant primary research literature

(with citations) but avoiding a detailed related literature or a summary of the results. It should also be brief, clear, and direct to the point and introduction should not be more than 500 words.

METHODOLOGY

This section allows another researcher to judge or actual repeat the methodology. Hence, should be replicable and should provide sufficient details to allow the work to be reproduced. This section should be presented in chronological order, but unnecessary details should be avoided. Methods already published should be indicated by a reference: only relevant modifications should be described. Sub-heading 1- If sub-heading is needed, it should begin in paragraphs and appear italicized and bold, follow by a hyphen.
